

Zoophilia in the US in 2002:

17th October, 2002

I'll get right to the point: We - zoophiles - need to get our web pages back up on line. Not today, not tomorrow, but as soon as possible. The current situation, where zoophilia is represented in the public (that is solely the web) only as porn and sex, is hurting us every single fucking day!

Let me give an account of what happened around zoophilia in the last ten years, even if you know this yourself. It will lead me to the present and what is required next:

Zoophilia and sex with animals is deemed a sin by the three major religions of our western society. Religion led science to believe that there is something "sick", meaning mentally sick, about transspecies sexual activity or action, which is the reason why Freud defined zoophilia as a perversion, just like he did with homosexuality. This viewpoint is inspired religiously by the dominating Christian sexual morals of the late 19th century (1870) in Freud's Europe and is emanating into the present.

Today, or more precisely, about 5 to 10 years ago we have a situation of rapidly changing culture and life with fast-paced economy and technical inventions. This is a very threatening situation for conservative people who would like to keep things the way they are or were.

Just at this very moment, zoophiles start showing off their existence on the face of the earth. Not on purpose, not to provoke, but in unmindful delight of having found each other and discovering a common sexual orientation. Zoophiles start creating dozens or hundreds of good looking and well visited web pages. On these non-commercial web pages zoophiles described how harmless and how caring they and their relationships to animals are. There was no apparent reason, why society (or some parts of it - I'll come to that a little later) would lash out at them with such hatred, force and effectivity...

But zoophiles were naive.

They didn't look at the world around them. They screamed out their own coming-out message without thinking about how that could be received by a world or rather by some people which were just at that moment in such-and-such a personal state.

Let's change perspectives here for a moment:

Picture the average conservative middle-aged and religious American citizen. Technical development and the changes of society and standards such as pollution, overly fast-paced consumer economics, women's rights, the Internet etc. are all rather threatening developments for a religious upbringing and a conservative mind which would like to keep things as they are or even were.

Exactly at the climax of fast-paced changes, together with the spreading of the Internet, zoophiles start showing their face to society, coincidentally in the very medium of modern technical development and changes, in the Internet!

Before this background it becomes obvious that this face is perceived as one of the many devil's faces, threatening the standards and lives of conservative religious citizens who would like their children to be as they are and to keep things unchanged.

Zoophiles just picked the wrong moment for their coming out. Conservative religious people were already backed into a corner by the fast-paced changes of our modern world...

But when is the right moment? Nobody knew when the pace of developments and changes for all human kind would slacken.

I don't blame zoophiles for their public appearing at the wrong moment. They acted innocently and naive, but truthfully, convinced, that their purity, good will and honesty would be sufficient to convince anybody... It was convincing, VERY convincing, all too convincing, and this exactly made them all the more threatening to religious conservative people. They perceived - and still do - zoophiles as the incarnation of the devil, threatening their values, their religious based view of the world and their very religion! - Which zoophilia does! And all the more convincing zoophiles were, and all the better arguments they had, all the more threatening and dangerous they seem and are to religious people all over the country (and world). People who fear a degradation of our civilized achievements or morals, people who literally fear what the bible warns and fights against, ancient Wicca and Pagan religions which were replaced by Christianity, Judaism and Islam. Religions which not only knew, accepted and often celebrated sex between humans and animals, but also knew the horrible cruelties of human and animal (!!!) sacrifice.

This is what has really been happening and what baffles and stuns zoophiles. Zoophiles don't or couldn't understand why society, or much rather conservative Christians lashed out at them with such force, hate and unreasoning fury.

Zoophiles and zoophilia was knocked down flat on its face by the brute force of the "counterattack" - how the "defending" religious people, the conservative Christians call and perceive it.

To Zoophilia it was not a counterattack but a horrible and unprovoked attack only moments after its birth and public appearance on the internet. - And all the more horrible and scaring are the wounds inflicted upon zoophilia and zoophiles.

This is where we are today. Zoophilia (in the US) is laying face-down in the mud and hurt badly. Bleeding...

The Internet is almost stripped of idealistic zoophile sites and the topic is reigned by commercial animal-sex porn pages which are just not as easily brought down as individual homepages due to their financial power.

This leaves two extremely wrong, nasty and devastating views about interspecies sexual contact between humans and animals to the public, which is perfectly in the interest of the religious enemies of zoophilia: 1: Zoophilia and sex with animals was just a perverted new kinky fashion which now blew over because "perverts" got tired of it and are now looking for other sources of "pervert" fun...2: Zoophilia always was and is just about sex as is obvious by the 99% porn representation of zoophilia in the internet now.

These two views to the public are a potential death threat to zoophilia and if nothing is done, zoophilia might as well bleed to death right there in the mud, meaning a future prosecution of zoo porn and zoophiles just like child porn and pedophiles. It's like after Pearl Harbor, when the US forces were seriously injured and almost incapable to defend the country...

What's needed?

Not much.

We don't have to strike back like the US army eventually did.

We just have to get back up on our feet and say: "OK. You hit us and you hurt us badly. But that doesn't change a thing about the facts or even puts a kink in our reasoning."

- We must get our homepages and message to the public back online. It doesn't matter if we're bleeding. What matters is that violence and hate does not change anything about the facts, that our arguments and reasoning is true even if we are hit and abused. That, and only that, will eventually drive our point home and make it clear that we are not pedophiles nor sick people nor in need of correction or help.

One extremely important thing at least we zoophiles MUST all absolutely understand: The war against zoophilia is a purely religious war. Not a war of reasoning. A religious war against the ancient religious enemies of Christianity, as they are perceived in zoophilia.

We are not, never will and never were fighting animal rightists and animal protectionists. Not in the least. We are zoophiles. We are the animal rightists and animal protectionists.

Animal rightism and animal protectionism as in the case of the HSUS and a few other organizations worldwide is clearly and to 100% abused to fight a (personal) religious war of Christianity (or of other religions) against zoophilia.

Anybody with a rational mind will understand in .02 seconds that sexual activities between humans and animals do not have to be an abuse of the animal through the human. Legg-humping dogs have long ago proved this. Don't buy it one second!

The psychotherapists who programmed and turned Randal Peppé against zoophiles are not just psychotherapists! They are humans with a job and they are humans with a religion. The HSUS or members of ASAIRS are not just "animal protectionists". They are humans, they are animal protectionists or rightists and they are individuals with a religion. And it's no coincidence, that all people who fight and oppose zoophilia, no matter if they are animal protectionists, psychotherapists, politicians, construction workers or strip dancers, are all religious people and people with a religious upbringing. People of any religion which opposes zoophilia. And all these people are fighting nothing but a religious war against zoophiles, just like in some countries Moslems are fighting a "holy war" against Christians or Jews! Only this "holy war", the war against zoophilia is raging right now, takes place in the middle of America, is highly illegal and extremely dangerous to the stability of the United States, because religious polarization leading to religious discrimination and fighting can have catastrophic effects in a country with so many different cultures, nationalities and religions as the USA. Just look at Ireland and what religious war between Protestants and Catholics is doing or has done there.

Religious discrimination is pure poison for religious freedom and the stability of a multi-cultured and multi-religious country like the United States. I'm sure there are good and serious laws, constitutions and bills of rights against it and that the US government has a serious interest to protect all citizens, including zoophiles from religious discrimination, as religious discrimination and oppression within a country can lead directly to terrorism and civil war.

Opponents of zoophilia understand this all too well and hide their religious fear and hatred behind masks of animal rightism or psychotherapy, claiming zoophilia is abuse and a mental illness. Don't believe it. People claiming such don't believe it themselves! They say it to do maximum damage at minimal risk to their religious agenda of fighting people who don't share their religion. They say it to fight a religious war against people who believe something different than they. That's all there's to it.

This must be exposed openly and stopped. And the only way is a political way. Zoophiles must organize themselves and start exerting political pressure if they want to stop the religious oppressions of Christians against them! And it doesn't need a majority to do so!

Even minorities are protected by religious rights and freedom. Become politically active, study your constitutional bills of rights, check out your religious freedom, and name anti-zoophilia and anti-zoophile laws what they legally are: Illegal religious discrimination and oppression. It's time to fight for religious freedom in the United States and Zoophiles have the very best interest to do so. The very very best interest, now and today! If they don't do it, no one else will. I am very sure of that indeed!

Fight for your rights of religious freedom and especially for your constitutional rights to freedom from religious oppression! Sexual pleasure of animals and mental health of zoophiles can be, will be or has been scientifically proven. No more arguments about that are needed anymore! It is now time to call a spade a spade. - And to do something about it.

And don't worry about Randal Peppe. He is the product of his own retched past and what Christian psychoanalysts and professional Christian mind-programmers have left of him. He is a Gollum to zoophilia who will mercilessly tear down anything he can. Such is his programming. But he still remains merely one individual, a hacker who just pinpoints security flaws which eventually could have or would become an issue in the religious war of religious fundamentalists against zoophilia anyway.

Face it zoophiles: What we're up against is religious fundamentalism and acts of terror against us. Perhaps explainable, as I have tried, but absolutely unjustified terror.

Nothing has changed about the wisdom of keeping your personal information to yourself and not telling others in the Internet your name and address. But this doesn't mean you have to be politically stunned and incapacitated like you have been. In many cases you can trust authorities with your address and you can fight politically by writing letters and demanding your human rights such as freedom from religious oppression by illegal and unconstitutional anti-bestiality laws.

As a last remark, although Randal Peppe and the HSUS would like to take credit for it, they are by far not the only reason many zoophile sites disappeared. Financing and financial problems of hosting non-commercial sites was a problem from the early beginning. Zoophile sites may be banned from geocities and the like, but so are homosexual and other sexuality related sites. The euphoria of the upcoming Internet and discovering other zoos and zoophilia as a shared sexual orientation initially led many zoophiles to pay for their sites out of their own pockets - or the novelty of the issue left hosts unaware of zoophile sites.

This euphoria and novelty has blown over, but contrary to zoophile presence in the Internet and to public image, zoophiles are still here and they must be represented to make a legal point and a legal stand against their or any religious discrimination. That's why it's essential that a spade is called a spade, that anti-bestiality laws are named what they are, religious oppression and illegal laws, that zoophiles start defending themselves against illegal religious oppression and that some reliable, legal and publicly known national zoophile organization is funded and maintains public relations and at least one non-porn site. Not loud propaganda is essential, but an unremoveable rock in the stream.

It's not information, it's not a will to fight for one's beliefs and it's hopefully not even persistency which zoophiles lack in opposition to their religious enemies such as the HSUS. It's only organization! (And sometimes the naivety to believe individuals and organizations such as the HSUS or ASAIRS would fight them because of anything that might have even remotely anything to do with animals.)

A national zoophile organization might not be able to man as many members as a national religious organization such as the HSUS, but I'm sure we can man as many people as worked actively in the HSUS in their first-strike campaign against zoophilia. And I believe even in America zoophiles have the constitutional right to freedom from religious oppression and dictatorship working in their favor. Use and apply it!

Knowing how sensitive and allergic zoophiles are to leadership and head-figures, I won't sign this text in favor of the cause. Who wrote it is absolutely irrelevant. What matters is what it says. Because most zoo sites are down, this text may and should be distributed freely by all means.
